BPW Joondalup Members Presents

Trish Williams and Racheal Mahncke will present on computer security - is your computer safe?

Dr Trish Williams is a Senior Lecturer at Edith Cowan University. With 17 years in the medical and pharmacy computing industry, Trish lectures in computer security, digital forensics, information warfare, networking, medical informatics and decision making. She also has a keen interest in the development of lifelong learning and generic skills. Trish has a PhD in Medical Informatics and Security and is a primary researcher in the SECAU Security Research Centre at ECU, with over 40 publications in the areas of information security, digital forensics and education

Rachel Mahncke works as a lecturer in the area of computing and IT at Perth Institute of Business and Technology (PIBT). She has a degree in software engineering with honours, and is studying towards her PhD in the area of medical information security. Rachel has been working with Trish for over five years as a sessional lecturer and tutor at ECU in the School of Computer and Information Science, and as a research assistant. Over this period, she has also co-authored twelve peer reviewed papers. Like Trish, Rachel shares a passion for information security, which led them to identify a need in the market for practical information security advice.
